

German Ice Report - No. 04
2018-02-14

CC 10//0 20//0

There is new ice and up to 10 cm thick ice in some harbours and in shallow and sheltered coastal waters. The ice coverage is decreasing.

Outlook:

Overnight, temperatures will mostly drop below the freezing point so that there may be little new ice formation in shallow and sheltered areas. However, during the day temperatures will rise above the freezing point and most of the ice will melt.
